

A Request from the Board of Trustees Concerning Cell Phones and Pagers

To many people, cellular phones are not a luxury, but an essential part of their busy lives. Cellular phones keep busy people on the go in touch with family and friends, and business people connected to their businesses. However, in a Library environment, cellular phones can be disruptive and intrusive to those around them.

We ask that you do not take or make cellular phone calls while you are in the Library. Further, if beepers are also a part of your hectic life, please put them on a “vibrating” setting, rather than have them go off for all to hear.

Please be courteous to other Library users and take or make your calls outside of the Library.

The pay phone is adjacent to a public area and its use should not be disruptive to the library.
